

Hemorrhoids More Condition_ : Thrombosed Hemorrhoids

Hemorrhoid is a very difficult situation and often a very painful condition as well. It is a medical condition which is characterized by pain and bleeding through the anus. In case you are suffering from this condition, then in that case, passing of stool may prove to be very painful. Since constipation is considered to be a major cause for this condition, therefore, one of the basic requirements in such a condition is that of avoiding constipation. For this, it is essential to have a high fiber diet, such as fruits, vegetables as well as whole grains. You should also make sure that you drink lots and lots of fluids, such as water, fruit juices, etc. you should also avoid junk foods, as they are very low in fiber content and also carry little nutritious value.

How to Treat Hemorrhoids

The early stages of hemorrhoids in the elderly can easily be addressed by a change of lifestyle. Increased intake of food rich in fiber or more frequent exercising can help stool make softer and make it pass easily. This would help in preventing the bar stool from irritating the anal muscles..

What Causes Hemorrhoids?

The condition cannot be attributed to one specific cause. A number of factors, whether it be lifestyle, genetic makeup and status may contribute to its occurrence.. Some factors that contribute are usually the lack of exercise, sitting for lengthy periods of time, the absence of high fiber food in the diet, irregular bowel movement (whether it be diarrhea or constipation), obesity as well as weak anal muscle groups.

- There are also creams and over the counter drugs that one can avail of to help increase metabolism and soften stools.
- However, it is best to consult a doctor before subscribing to these treatments.

Bleeding from the Rectum

Rectal bleeding while expelling feces is often a result of the condition. Once any of the above symptoms appear, it is best to have a doctor confirm the presence of hemorrhoids through a diagnosis. Normally a doctor would do a visual examination of the rectum or even the surrounding skin. If any of the areas are swollen then the person is hurting from a hemorrhoid. If there is no perceptible evidence of the presence of an external hemorrhoid, then a doctor may opt to search for internal hemorrhoids through proctoscopy or anoscopy. When these are detected, a doctor would often recommend a rectal exam to rule out the presence of any tumors.
